Pakikinig sa mga boses ng mga Ati sa Boracay.

The Network of Professional Researchers and Educators (NPRE) is steadfast in its mission to engage researchers and educators in the quest for new knowledge. They are doing so through a series of workshops conducted in Luzon, Visayas, and Mindanao, with a specific focus on exploring the "indigenius" of Filipinos and its significance in addressing the pressing issue of climate change.

In addition, NPRE acknowledges the vital role of the Filipino language in research endeavors. To promote this, they have collaborated with the Sentro ng Wika at Kultura of Sorsogon State University and the University of Southern Mindanao to organize Lirip 7: "Pandaigdigang Kumperensiya sa Filipino."

Furthermore, NPRE extends an open invitation to all researchers to participate in an international conference hosted by Fu Jen Catholic University in Taiwan. They also encourage researchers to publish their valuable findings in the International Journal of Research Studies in Education (IJRSE).
